FLOOD TRIAL WITNESS TELLS OF CONFIDENCE OF MRS. FLOOD CONCERNING MOTHER OF GIRL

Interest Tense in Court Room As Old Servants and Friends Tell Of Household

All Remember Mrs. Gavin As Constance

Former Retainers of Flood Home Called to Stand in Trial

capized and both were thrown into the water. Later Mrs. Gavin said she told Flood of the incident and he cried, "What would I do if my child were drowned?"

Mrs. Gavin also accompanied Flood and his daughter to the Orient shortly after the death of Mrs. Rose Flood. She told many of the family incidents connected with the relations of Flood and the girl, whom everyone at that time considered to be his daughter.

After Mrs. Gavin had given her direct testimony she was cross-examined by Theodore Roche, who endeavored to entangle the old lady in her own testimony. For more than an hour she was grilled by the Flood attorney, but without avail. She told her story in a straight-forward manner and clung to every detail in spite of the rapid fire of the confusing questions shot at her by the attorney. During the whole affair she maintained her self-control, but upon leaving the witness chair she broke down into hysterical sobs and cried to friends who assisted her, "I'm telling the truth, and he can't do anything to twist me, no matter how hard he tries."

It was "old folks day" at court and all the witnesses were grey-haired old folks who were grown men and women when Mrs. Gavin was a baby. Charles Murdock, whose ranch adjoined that of Flood during the '90s, was called to the stand to tell of having known Flood and his little daughter, and described the fatherly treatment of the girl by Flood.

Mrs. Theresa Blake, widow of the former superintendent of Flood's ranch was called. Mrs. Blake remembered Constance perfectly, and said that she was always considered to be Flood's daughter. She recalled Christmas of 1897 when Constance sent a Christmas present consisting of a little sailor suit and an express wagon to her own son, Clarence.

One of the outstanding witnesses for Mrs. Gavin was Joel C. Evans, former navy officer, and who saw service in the battle of Manila. Evans recalled having met Flood at Kobe, Japan, during a trip to the Orient. He returned on the Belgic, the same ship which the Flood party was on, and continued the acquaintance which had sprung up in Japan.

Evans told of his conversations with Flood on the Belgic. Flood told him, he said, that his stay in the Orient had been cut short by financial matters arising out of the Spanish-American war. He told of his wife having recently died, but said that he was glad that she had left him a little daughter.

The retired officer also told of how Flood had told him that he intended to publish a paper upon the return to California concerning the trip to the Orient. At this point a copy of the paper was introduced as evidence, and was identified as the same paper by Evans. Evans said that Flood always referred to the girl as his daughter, and always treated her as a daughter.

After the arrival of the ship in San Francisco, Evans said, his acquaintance with Flood was continued. He recalled having met him once on Montgomery street and of having taken lunch with him. He received an invitation to the wedding of Flood and Maud Fritz, sister of Mrs. Rose Flood, which took place in Kansas City.

George Sartorius, an old miner and iron worker, was another witness. He was personally acquainted with Flood and also with his father, he said. Sartorius told how he had an iron works in San Francisco in the '90s, and how Flood came to him one day and asked him to go to his house at 1893 Page street and take measurements for an iron gate. "George," Sartorius said Flood told him, "I want you to fix up an iron gate across the head of the stairs to keep my baby from falling down. She is just beginning to creep."

Sartorius said that he went to Flood's house and met Mrs. Rose Flood. Mrs. Flood asked him to go into the house and look at the baby. She asked him if he did not think her girl was a fine baby, and he said that he did.

Other witnesses appearing during the Wednesday session were Carrie Worth, for six years a seamstress in the Flood home, and Mrs. Louise Baffa, former cook in the same establishment.

Their testimony was that of the others. The girl raised as a daughter by both Flood and his wife, and considered as one of the family by all who knew them.

Practically all of yesterday's session of the famous case was taken up by the cross examination of Mrs. Gavin. Constance May Gavin in the witness stand appeared perfectly at ease, she gave every indication of refinement and of good breeding.

The direct testimony of Mrs. Gavin was brief. She recalled certain incidents of her early life at the ranch at Alma; recalled vaguely the Flood home on Pacific street in San Francisco; she remembered Flood as her father; and recalled attending his marriage with the present Mrs. Flood in Kansas City.

Mrs. Gavin's earliest recollections go back to about the time that she was five years of age, and all of these deal with the Flood household. Later she recalled being sent to a convent in Kansas City, but living at the home of her supposed grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz, parents of Mrs. Rose Flood and also of Mrs. Maud Flood. She recalled distinctly being brought to California by her nurse, Petra, and of being taken to an office which she understood to have been Flood's. She could not recall, however, whether or not Flood was in the office, but remembered certain men whom she did not know, signing some documents.

After the incident at the office, the witness recalled having been taken to the convent at Alhambra, where she remained until 1911. At that time, at the age of 18 years, the girl was called one day into the office of the mother superior and told that she was a "closed incident" as far as the convent was concerned, and told to leave.

A point which was brought out yesterday was that Mrs. Gavin had twice written to Flood after she left the Alhambra convent, and had asked him who her parents were. This was prior to her marriage, and she explained that she felt that if she were going to be married her husband should also know who her parents were.

Her first letter was unanswered, but in answer to her second letter James E. Walsh went from San Francisco to Alhambra to see her. He told her that her father's name was Stearns and that her mother was Miss Ford, now Mrs. Willette. Jewelry given her by Flood and bearing the engraved initials of C. M. F., was also introduced.

Mrs. Gavin was subjected to a grueling cross-examination by Attorney Theodore Roche. Throughout the rapid fire of cross examination, which continued the rest of the day, Mrs. Gavin maintained the same composure which had characterized her first testimony in the witness stand. She remained unshaken in her testimony, confirming statements made by her

Colma Voters Ask To Join In Daly City

Annexation Proposition Given
Affirmative Majority
In Tuesday Vote

At a special election held at Colma on Tuesday, the voters of that district voted to ask the city council of Daly City to take the territory of Colma into the incorporated limits of Daly City. The move is said to have been prompted by the desire upon the part of the people of Colma for better police and fire protection and other advantages accruing to an incorporated area.

The vote on the part of the Colma residents, however, was not unanimous. The returns of the election showed 94 to favor the change and 61 opposing it.

The matter will be brought before the city council of Daly City at its regular meeting Monday evening. In the event that the council does not see fit to accept Colma as a part of Daly City, the matter will have to be voted upon by the citizens of the latter city.

Menlo Park Woman Charges Desertion

Charging that her husband, Florian Decker, had deserted her, Mrs. Lucille Decker, has applied to the superior court of this county for a divorce. Through her attorney, Jas. T. O'Keefe, Mrs. Decker charges that Decker deserted her in March of this year. They were married in Grand Junction, Colorado, in April, 1922. The couple have two children, one 7 and one 5. Custody of the two children is asked by the mother. Mrs. Decker lives in Menlo Park.

Earlier in the day in regard to her girlhood recollections, although she was not able to recall other matters suggested by Roche, and which she had not mentioned. Throughout the court session, Mrs. Gavin remained unshaken in her testimony. As the trial advances more and more interest is shown and the court room is crowded to capacity long before the case is opened. When court is adjourned for the noon hour, many who have been standing remain in order to get the seats of those who leave; and many who are seated remain as not to lose their advantage.

It has been estimated by one of the attorneys connected with the case that the case will occupy the court for at least six weeks. No matter which side is given the verdict of the jury in this contest, it is generally conceded that the case will be appealed, and attorneys for both sides are taking no chances. Every move is watched with caution and practically every remark by the opposing attorneys is prefaced with, "Now, your honor, for the sake of the record."

Judge Buck is hurrying the case along as fast as is possible, and is reducing irrelevant matters to a minimum. He is conducting the case with promptness and dignity.

The case gives a view of legal talent at its best. Both sides have the best attorneys obtainable, and the case promises to be a battle of wits, with plenty of acumen on both sides.

Rattle Snake Not Bug, Says Athlete

Dud DeGroot, former Stanford football captain and now coach at the Menlo Junior College, has been busy this week giving his two small daughters, Nancy 6, and Sally, 18 months, lessons in biology, trying to impress upon their minds that rattlesnakes are not "nice big bugs."

The two little girls were playing in the yard of the DeGroot home at Menlo Park last Tuesday, when Nancy came running to her father, and told him to come and see the nice "big bug" with which Sally and the family kitten were playing.

The "bug" proved to be a 2 1/2 foot rattlesnake. DeGroot killed the reptile, which had nine rattles and was just ready to strike, with a shotgun.

Former Resident Passes in South

Mrs. Daisy Perkins, who as Miss Daisy Brabazon, member of a pioneer family of Redwood City, will be remembered by many of the older residents of the community, passed away in Los Angeles last Thursday. Funeral services were held on Saturday.

Mrs. Perkins was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brabazon, early settlers in Redwood City. She was born here and attended the local schools. She married Louis Perkins, who for many years was superintendent of the Edison Power Company at Huntington Lake, Fresno county. For the past several years the couple have been making their home in Los Angeles. Death followed several strokes of paralysis.

A sister, Mrs. Lillie Fahey of San Francisco and a brother, Will Brabazon of Woodside, survive. Mrs. Perkins was the aunt of Clyde and Walter Genocchio of this city.

City Councils Against Track

Atherton and South City in Move Against New Race
Track Herea

Opposition to any further extension of racing in San Mateo county has been pronounced by two San Mateo county cities this week; South San Francisco in the extreme northern part of the county; the other is Atherton, in the southern extremity of the county.

Both city groups believe that the best interests of the county will be served by the curtailment of racing in the county. The Atherton resolution opposes the establishment of a race track on the Woodside road, on the ground that this section of the county is a center of educational institutions, and that the operation of a race track here would be detrimental to these institutions; that it would be detrimental to the residential sections which surround the proposed site of the track; that the one track at present operated in the county is sufficient for those who enjoy racing, and that the establishment of a track here would attract an undesirable class of citizens to this section of the county.

The resolution was given the unanimous endorsement of the Atherton council.

Preparations Under Way for Annual Rodeo

Carl Dennis Directing Plans
And Arrangements

While interest is running high in the queen contest for the annual Redwood City Rodeo to be staged at the Middlefield road arena, August 2, at the same time, preparation of the quarter-mile race track and the grand stand is being rushed to completion well in advance of the big round-up.

Carl Dennis of Tanforan, well known track expert, is directing the reconditioning of the racing strip around the local arena. The grandstand is being enlarged to seat nearly 5000 people, as many as were in attendance here last year, and accommodations are also being arranged for hundreds of others at points of vantage around the track.

Wide publicity for the Redwood City Rodeo was gained last year through the participation of leading prize winners from the Salinas, Livermore and Ukiah round-ups, and most of the outstanding riders and ropers, including Clay Carr, Johnnie Schneider, Pete Genant and Perry Ivory, have signed with Chairman Ernest Hecht for competition at Redwood City this year. Representatives of the Young Men's Institute, under whose auspices the Redwood City Rodeo is conducted, have announced the event at all cowboy events this season and will also be present at Salinas for the California Rodeo starting July 26.

Rubbish Fire in Down Town Dist.

The fire department was called to extinguish a rubbish fire in the rear of the Del Monte hotel at 1:55 Tuesday afternoon. A call was sent from box 14, and the department responded to find that the fire had spread from where the rubbish had been burned, and was threatening the rear of the frame structure. The fire was extinguished before any damage was done.

Wednesday the blowing of the whistle was the result of tests being made on the fire alarm box system.

Two Hurt When Car Overturns

Losing control of his car while driving on El Camino Real near the Tanforan race track, A. Dahl, San Francisco, was catapulted into a ditch, but escaped injury. Two occupants of his car, however, were not so fortunate. Mrs. Margaret Olson, 4287 Twenty-fourth street, San Francisco, and George Martens, Commodore hotel, San Francisco, both suffered injuries for which they were treated at the South San Francisco hospital. Martens, the most seriously injured, had several deep scalp wounds.

Summer Blowouts

Speaking of blowouts—we mean the kind tire repairers are invited to, not that other kind—it is suggested that you do not have them while going at high speed. Its a well-known fact that air will expand when heated and contract when chilled, and that when it does expand in a confined space, a tremendous pressure is exerted upon confining walls. The hot air to which we are referring to is that contained in auto tires. The greater the speed, the greater the difficulty when a front tire blows out. Bad tires are at their worst in hot weather. You don't have to replace those worn tires unless you want to, but for the sake of safety, for the sake of fenders, autos, lives and limbs—please don't speed with them. Speeding with weak tires on these hot days may mean an accident, perhaps a tragic one.

Rural Churches

Those who have lamented the so-called "waning influence of the rural churches are needlessly alarmed is the gratifying declaration of Dr. L. E. Barton, prominent Baptist leader. Dr. Barton says that the rural church is "growing and improving in the service it renders. The rural church is neither dead or dying; it is not our weakness but our strength; not our menace, but our might; not our grave but our gold mine of opportunity."

In voicing his reasons for these glowing convictions, Dr. Barton pays tribute to the faith of the rural people, to the honest simplicity of their lives and to their alertness these things the most priceless assets of the with respect to scriptural truths, finding in church.

That the rural church has been a mighty power in the spiritual life of the nation there can be no doubt.

Blocking the Roads

Those huge double-wheeled trucks with trailers that are becoming more common on the highways, look like railway trains that have lost their way. The big juggernauts, booming along at high speed, seem out of place in ordinary traffic. They don't shift their position easily and they don't need to. Any car that impedes their progress is simply out of luck. It would be interesting to know to what extent this heavy traffic is responsible for the broken surface on pavement that has been down a few years. It will be a great day when the taxpayer who pays for the hard-surface roads can drive over them without being crowded off of them by the big motor busses and trucks.

Suppressing News

One of a newspaper's troubles is the friend and often the personally unknown but "life-long subscriber" who wants something "kept out of the paper." Both have the largely mistaken idea that publishing a newspaper is a personal matter with the publisher, when as a matter of fact he is more in the position of a person with a public trust. If a paper is to be a strong factor in the community it cannot omit items of general public interest any more than it should unfairly color news that does appear. The reading public buys a newspaper because it expects to be kept informed of vital happenings in the community. If the publisher breaks faith with the subscriber, the latter soon loses confidence in the newspaper and eventually is not a read. Without circulation a newspaper is without life blood. That is serious, and no publisher with an ounce of judgment lets his paper's blood pressure become either too high or too low.

A Power Age

Henry Ford has called the present age, the age of power. All about us we see this view exemplified. A suction sweeper and a power washer come into the home and drudgery departs. A steam shovel does the work of a battalion of men with picks and shovels. An electric hoist frees legion of hodcarriers for other less tedious jobs.

Without power, this age could not exist. Imagine the cost of an automobile or a radio if each separate piece was tapped out by hand. Imagine the effect on the market for books, magazines and newspapers if homes were lighted only by oil lamps. Imagine the effect on real estate prices if there were no elevators, or transportation companies. — Nation's Business.

The Editorial Circuit Rider

(A symposium of editorial comment from California Newspapers)

Deaths through automobile accidents on California highways must be reduced.

Newspapers throughout the state recognize the dire need of increasing the safety of both pedestrians and drivers. Editors are united in the belief that only a few accidents are "unavoidable," and forward more strict enforcement of laws and safety educational campaigns as means of solving the problem.

More than one publication raises a doubt concerning the advisability of raising California's speed limit from 40 to 45 miles an hour. At the same time they do not completely condemn the higher rate, pointing out that the outcome will be "interesting."

"With increased speed possible," The Pomona Progress-Bulletin states, it devotes solely on the motorist at the wheel to develop more caution.

"There is no need of enormous sacrifice of precious life every year. The elimination of carelessness and recklessness and a strict observance of traffic laws will reveal a marked reduction of fatalities."

The Bakersfield Californian joins in this opinion by placing the burden on the driver, calling particular attention to that fact that "since 1927, deaths to pedestrians have increased only 5 per cent; among drivers, deaths have increased 35 per cent."

"The pedestrian apparently is learning how to take care of himself," The Stockton Record claims. "Evidently we need 'careful driving' campaigns much more than we need 'don't jay-walk' campaigns."

From the standpoint of children The Vallejo Times-Herald believes that "Slow the speed and spare the child" is a good slogan. "Motorists must realize that children act first and think afterwards."

However, The Riverside Daily Press believes that accidents involving young people are decreasing proportionately because "children are being taught to avoid accidents. Isn't it about time that adults got a stiffer dose of safety education?" The Press asks.

The Santa Rosa Republican would go farther than that. "Even one serious traffic violation should be considered sufficient grounds for the revocation of a driver's license. And some day it will be."

A little lesson in highway etiquette that means additional safety is called to the attention of the motorist by The San Jose News. "Even when one undoubtedly has the 'right of way' it is often a first requirement of safe driving to yield that right of way to the other fellow."

One-Room Schools

How much training have the teachers of the 153,000 one-rooma rural schools of the nited States, is a question answered by a recent summary of the Federal Office of Education:

"If all the teachers of one-teacher schools stood side by side, their ranks would extend in an unbroken line 87 1-10 miles. Assuming this army of teachers were arranged in such a way that the one having received the least amount of training stood at one end and the one having received the largest amount of training at the other, a person reviewing this company would find it necessary to walk a distance of 8 1/2 miles before coming to a teacher with a training equivalent to two years of high school.

"One would have to walk half the entire distance before approaching a teacher with training equal to high school graduation, and would have to continue his walk for a total distance of 67 3-5 miles before reaching the first teacher with the equivalent to two years of normal school education. The jaunt would be continued to within 13 miles of the end of the line before one who had the equivalent of a college education would be reached.

"Although one-teacher schools are being abandoned at the rate of 4,200 per year in favor of consolidated schools, one-teacher schools still open their doors to more farm children than any other type of school."

Ah! Mr. Doherty!

The libel suit for $12,000,000, filed by Henry L. Doherty, the New York utilities magnate, against the Kansas City Star, was met with "smiles" in Washington. Doherty threw Washington's most expensive social event last winter.

The state of Kansas is resisting allegedly exorbitant gas rates and it has barred the sale of Cities Service public service stock. In consequence Doherty has cut loose and is carrying on a vigorous fight against the governor of the state, its principal newspapers, and everybody else that resists his autocratic desires. Maybe he can get away with it—everything seems possible, for haven't we seen a magician take a rabbit out of a hat.

Is Youth Religious?

Bruce Barton has been trying to find out whether modern youth is as irreligious as some people charge. "If modern youth is not religious, it is only because youth has never been religious," he decides in the American Magazine. "In all the fundamentals of living I cannot see that the young people of today are any different from those of forty years ago. Religion, however, is not a gift with which we are born. It is an achievement, an experience, forged out of years of living, suffering and thought."

Charles Dickens told the story of the suit of Jarndice vs Jarndice which was in the courts for so long that all the principals died, the attorneys died, and all connected with the case died. Still it was in court. We were just thinking what will happen to the Flood case if either side appeals it from the decision of Judge Buck.

GAY ADVENTURERS BY MILDRED BARBOUR

"I give you my word that I'm telling you the truth," said Sheila.

Illustrated by Hugh Hutton

(Copyright, 1928, Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York)
CONCERNING THE ACTION AND CHARACTERS

SHEILA ALLEN, bound for Europe in a tourist cabin, has a cabin-mate.

CONSTANCE KERR, a millionaire's daughter, who is her twin in looks. Sheila, after years in a rural town, is seeking adventure.

She has refused to marry her guardian, YOUNG DOCTOR MALCOM BAXTER. Constance tells Sheila she is Heaven-sent-a means of escape from a terrible mess.

Constance is fleeing from her husband, THE COUNT DE BELLE-FONTE, whom she married that morning.

She consented to marry him after a quarrel with HARRY EDMONDS, with whom she is desperately in love.

His letters begging her forgiveness are kept from her by her mother. She finds them immediately after her marriage. Realizing that she can never be the Count's wife, she takes passage for Europe at once. Harry is in England.

She begs Sheila to impersonate her in Paris for a few days, while she seeks Harry in London, to try to find a way out of her muddle. Sheila, scenting adventure agrees. Constance gives Sheila her clothes and coaches her for the role she is to play. A first-class passenger.

TOMMY FITZGERALD, an old beau of Constance's, sees Sheila and hails her as Constance. Sheila tells him he has made a mistake.

At Southampton Constance leaves the ship as Sheila Allen, with all of Sheila's effects, including her passport.

At Harve, Fitzgerald sees Sheila with Constance's passport and she says she is the heiress, and explains the tourist passage as payment of a bet. A strange woman embraces her as an old friend.

There she receives a message from the Count, who is in Paris.

Harry Edmonds arrives in Paris. Sheila is panic-stricken. She wonders where Constance is.

To escape both Harry and the informs her aunt in Baden-Baden that her niece is ill. The aunt radios Mr. Kerr, who radios Sheila that he is coming to Paris.

She succeeds in convincing Aunt Sophia that her presence is not required in Paris. A message from Mr. Kerr tells that the his yacht is disabled and that he cannot come to Paris for some time.

Harry urges her to marry him immediately. She puts him off.

The Baronne is angry, for she wants a clear field for her stepson, CARLO, whom she is anxious to marry off.

To keep Harry pacified, Sheila agrees to announcing their engagement shortly.

Harry denies this and the Count challenges him to a duel.

Chapter 31—

The Confession

Many times since she had been impersonating Constance Kerr in Paris and Cannes, Sheila Allen had tried to picture to herself the scene that would follow her announcement that she was not the heiress to the Kerr millions, but merely a person who was her double in appearance.

There would be denunciations, a demand for explanations, and finally a reckoning with the authorities for violation of passport regulations. This was the situation her imagination had conjured up, time and again.

Now, as she faced the Baronne, the Count de Bellefonte, and Harry Edmonds and said that she had come to Paris at Constance Kerr's request, to impersonate her, she was sure that she had been justified in all her fears.

She felt a terrible pang as she thought of the trouble that her confession would bring to Constance, but she was convinced that she would not be silent any longer.

She was between two fires. If she kept her secret, and Harry met the Count in a duel and was killed, how could she ever face Constance?

So, taking a deep breath, she told the story of her meeting with Constance, omitting only the fact of Constance's marriage and her reason for going abroad. She said that Constance had done a rather indiscreet thing and that she preferred to drop out of sight for a time. The Count, she noticed, looked relieved.

For a moment after she ceased speaking, her listeners stared at her, as if they did not understand the significance of what she was telling them. Then they burst into a storm of questions. The Count and the Baronne bombarded her in French.

"The police," gasped the Baronne. "Send for a gendarme at once!" The Count turned to Harry. "Until we get to the bottom of this, my challenge is withdrawn."

But Harry was not listening. Taking Sheila by the hand, he looked at her long and earnestly. "Not Constance—you're not Constance?" he murmured. "Let me understand this. She went to London—"

He broke off abruptly and shook Sheila's arm. "Where is she then? On this must be a dream. I can't believe—"

"I give you my word that I'm telling you the truth," said Sheila. "Your word!" shrieked the Baronne. "The truth. Why I don't believe a thing you say."

"Then, said Harry eagerly, to the Baronne, "You think she really is Constance?"

The Baronne glared at him. "I hardly know what I think," she muttered, half to herself. "Such conduct. If this girl is Constance Kerr, she's mad. That's all there is to it. I'm going to notify the Kerrs. Let them deal with her." Harry nodded in assent. "I think we should get in touch with Mr. Kerr, at least. Of course, this is a very delicate situation. If this girl is not Constance, then what has happened to Constance?"

The Count was slumped in a chair. At the proposal that the Kerrs be notified, he sprang up. The Baronne's words filled him with apprehension.

Suppose all that that girl had said was true? That did not change the fact of his marriage to Constance. He did not want her father on the ground, prying, investigating, perhaps unearthing the secret marriage. Better to wait a bit and question the girl at length.

He turned to the Baronne and said, in his most diplomatic manner:

"I do not think, my dear friend, that you have viewed the situation from all sides. Suppose that this girl is telling the truth—if we send for Mr. Kerr and he makes an investigation, will not the whole matter become public, or, at least, known to our own circle? Think of the light in which we will be placed. After all, it is not best to delay for a few days before taking any one into our confidence? We don't want to be made ridiculous, and that is how we'll appear, if it becomes known that this person fooled us. Think of your protection!"

"If this girl isn't Constance Kerr, I want to know where Constance is," he kept saying. "So do I, my dear fellow," the Count would rejoin, suavely. "But let's not turn the case over to Mr. Kerr. He'll go at once to the authorities. You surely must realize that it won't do Constance Kerr's name any good to be dragged into a mess like this. After all, we must think of that."

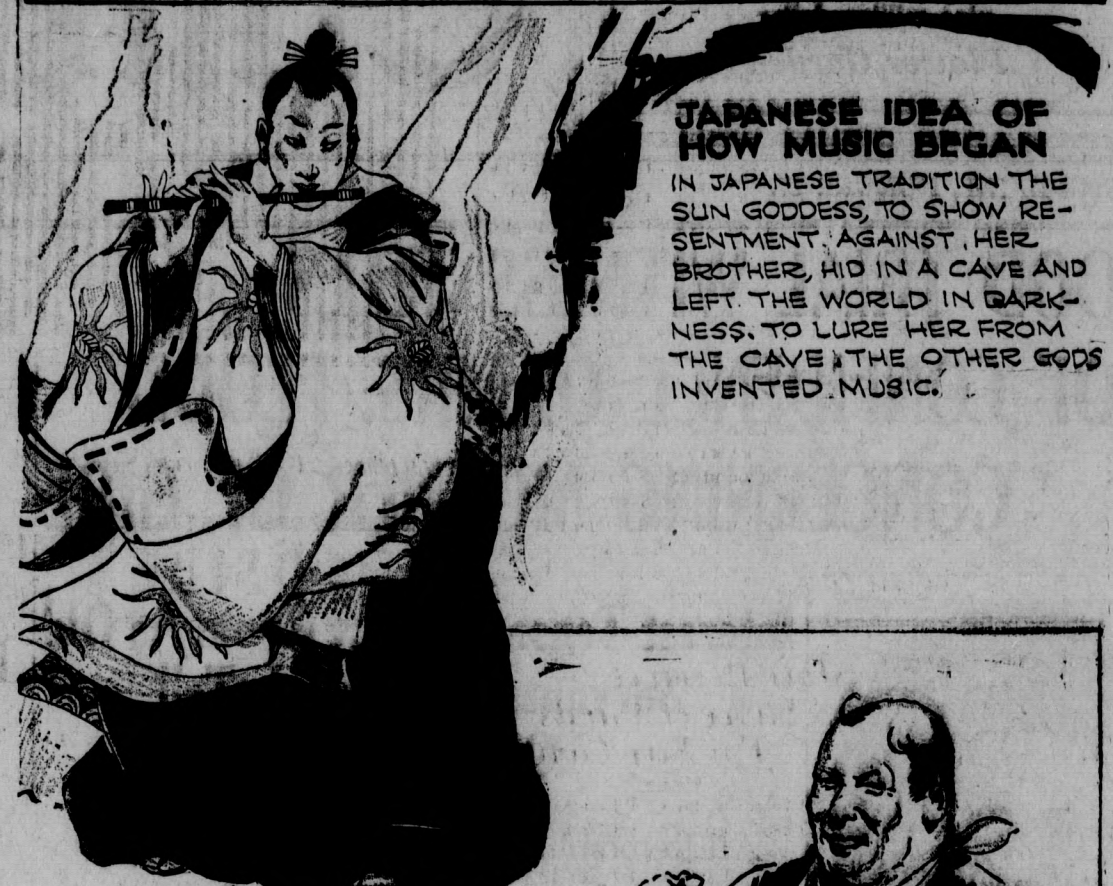

Harry agreed. "But what do you propose?" he asked.

"First of all, let us agree not to do anything more until morning," urged Bellefonte. "This has been very nerve-racking, and we all need sleep. I suggest that we see the Baronne and this young person back to the villa. The Baronne will see that she does not get away. Then you and I will return, and, in the morning, we three will meet and make our plans!"

During all this, Sheila had been silent. She had but one consolation. There would be no duel in the morning. That was something. Surely Constance, when she arrived, would forgive her for having made that confession, once the motive had been explained. The Baronne rose and put on her wrap. "And I am to be this young person's jailer?" she asked. "I'll promise you that I won't try to get away," said Sheila quietly. "I want to find Constance Kerr just as much as Mr. Edmonds does. She promised to be in Paris a few days after my arrival, and I have been so worried." "I should think you might be, if the story you tell is true," said Harry. "Granting that it is true, the thing that puzzles me is the reason for it all."

"That," said Sheila, "is Constance's secret. If she wants to explain when she arrives, that's her affair. But I can't tell you anything more. It was only to prevent this silly duel that I betrayed her confidence."

At these words, the Count looked at Sheila appraisingly. That last remark made him very uneasy.

How much did this girl know? The situation she had created was a very delicate one. He must act with the greatest care, for he had much at stake. He was glad that he had persuaded the Baronne and Harry to do nothing immediately. That would give him time to carry out a plan that had been forming in his mind for the past hour.

But for Him...

wheels would stop... homes go dark

Lightning strikes in the mountains. A high-voltage line goes out! But your service must not fail. It is up to the LOAD DISPATCHER... Reports flash by wire and radio. Men spring to action. Instantly, new current is cut-in. And you are serenely unaware of the crisis that might have plunged cities into darkness.

So dependable is today's electrical service that we seldom consider the factors which make it possible:

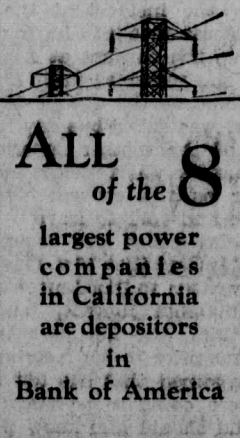

Vision, courage, engineering genius—and the constant vigilance of 33,000 workers.

California power companies, with widespread organizations and a billion-dollar investment, make effective use of Bank of America's unique service.

At 133 Bank of America branches in 117 cities, district offices deposit the checks and cash received from consumers.

Thus millions in funds flow through the Bank's statewide system to power companies—then back to California business concerns for equipment and supplies; to California workers for wages; to the state for taxes, etc.

Power companies, employees, consumers—all profit by Bank of America's assistance in financing industries, agriculture and homes. For this Bank's facilities help California to grow—help all of us to enjoy such conveniences as modern electrical service.

Doctor Tevis, who died in San Francisco last week, was a brother of Mrs. Fred Sharon, who went to England a few years ago to reside with her daughter. The vast estate here is closed and may never be opened by the family again. Many years ago Tevis bought the Flood place at Alma, known as Almadale. There he lived in retirement, devoting his time to horticulture, raising rare flowers. It is said that he had every known rose in his vast gardens. Tevis, like the late James Phelan, never married. Tevis left an estate of several millions, a portion of which was given to charity.

Cecil R. Buchanan, a veteran of the Spanish American war, was interred in the National cemetery at the Presidio at San Francisco Saturday. The deceased lived in Menlo Oaks. He is survived by a wife and daughter.

W. D. Shea, the widely known architect who passed away in San Francisco this week, was a resident of Atherton ten years ago. He built a palatial home on the highway in Wallington Park. It is now owned by Mr. Sutton, the millionaire and one of the promoters of the Dumbarton Bridge. Shea designed many of the large buildings in San Francisco. He built the Knights of Columbus hall at San Mateo.

The Flood will contest that started in Redwood City last Monday in the superior court there is drawing a large number of people from here daily. Many of the witnesses, who were former servants in the Flood household, are well known in Menlo Park. They are now old and decrepit but their memories are alert and they vividly recall the incidents of long ago. The case is interesting to the people of this place for all those connected with it are well known.

J. E. Strong, the tailor, was taken suddenly ill at his place of business in Burlingame on Wednesday and rushed to the Community hospital. He was found to be suffering from a heart attack. Mr. Strong resides in Menlo Park.

Last Tuesday evening a gang of hoodlums from out of town made a raid on automobiles parked near the New Menlo Theatre, removing articles of value from the cars and parts of the machinery. Chief Love is making a thorough search for the culprits and is hopeful of landing them in jail.

Daniel J. Lacey, better known as Jimmie Lacey, passed away at the Community hospital last Friday, following a short illness. He was widely known in this section of the state. His mother was a sister of James Murphy who came across the plains with Dennis Martin in 1844. Murphy was given a Spanish grant of 40,000 acres of land in the Santa Clara Valley. Murphy gave a portion of the vast holdings to relatives. Mrs. Lacey was given a ranch back of Stanford Campus, where Jimmie was born and raised. After graduating from Santa Clara College, Lacey engaged in farming not far from the scene of his birth. His remains were interred in Santa Clara cemetery on Monday. He was nearly 80 years old. He is survived by a brother, Patrick Lacey, residing in Mayfield.

Dan Morgan and George Edwards of San Francisco have taken the Sherman cottage on Cedar avenue off the Alameda de las Pulgas, Menlo Park.

Mrs. R. T. Smiler and her two sons of San Francisco have rented the Ross home on Santa Cruz avenue. Mrs. Smiler is the mother of Mrs. Grover Duke.

On July 28 the city council will meet to hear protests for contemplated improvements on Arbor, Johnston avenues and other streets in that vicinity. The property owners are satisfied with the plan of improvements and no protests are expected.

A big deal in real estate near Menlo Park is about to be consummated. The tract to be disposed of is the most valuable in this community and the price to be received is a princely one. The deal is to be closed next week when the news of the sale will be made public.

Constable Grill made an arrest yesterday of a Filipino on the Garland ranch. He was accused of stealing articles of value and money from his fellow countrymen employed as berry pickers on the ranch. A row among the Filipinos caused Grill to make a raid on the place. An arrest followed.

Constable Grill went to a certain place near town Monday to serve a summons on a man charged with reckless driving. Not being able to gain entrance to the house from the front of the house he went around to the rear, where strange sounds greeted his ears. He discovered that a man was engaged in breaking demijohns and bottles containing liquor. The owner of the house supposed that Grill was going to arrest him as a bootlegger and forthwith began to destroy the evidence against him. Not having a search warrant Grill was unable to make any arrests, but he did serve his summons and that is all he wanted to do. The bootlegger's suspicions were unfounded. A guilty conscience needs no accuser.

Lucille Decker has brought an action in the superior court of this county against Florian E. Decker for an interlocutory decree of divorce on the ground of desertion. The plaintiff resides on Santa Cruz avenue. Her husband left her and went to Oregon some time ago. They couple have two children. James T. O'Keefe is the attorney for plaintiff.

State Receives Share of Funds For Fire Control

California's share of Federal funds for forest control is $161,288 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, according to a telegram just received by Regional Forester S. B. Shaw of the U. S. Forest Service. This is an increase of nearly $14,000 over the allotment of last year. This appropriation is made under the Clarke-McNary law which provides for co-operation between the States and the Federal Government in fire control and is used by the State Division of Forestry for the purpose of employing additional rangers or guards, purchasing fire fighting equipment, erecting lookout towers or other prevention measures. Owing to California's increasing expenditures in forest fire control, the State's allotment from Federal funds has been augmented $104,000 in the last three years. The territory covered by the State Forester's protection organization lies outside of the boundaries of the national forests and embraces about 19,000,000 acres.

The State of Nevada will this year receive, for the first time, an allotment under the Clarke-McNary law. The amount is $1,220 and will be used on a co-operative fire control project between Nevada and the U. S. Forest Service located in the forest portion of that State on the California-Nevada line adjacent to the Tahoe National Forest.

A Prize Winning Advertisement

THIS advertisement, published last August, is a prize winner. It won the first of thirty-six awards made in New York on June 16 by the Public Utilities Advertising Association. It was first among thousands.

"The best advertisement," says the award, "published by a public utility operating company in the United States or Canada in 1930."

Proud as we are of the award, we are prouder still of the message the advertisement carries. So we print the advertisement once more—to tell of the prize winning and say again that buying at home makes jobs at home.

Buying at home is merely common sense. It builds up home payrolls, promotes community growth and prosperity—it makes better business conditions for everybody.

When we buy at home we are helping ourselves. We are spending our money with firms that buy electric power and natural gas from us. We are creating jobs for hundreds of workers who will want P. G. and E. service in their homes.

Burke's Victory in Open Please His Pro Rivals

Bill Burke's thrilling victory in the United States Open Golf Championship was a result which quite satisfied his brother professionals. Just as every pro wants to win, so does every pro have an alternate he would like to see capture the title.

The Burke victory, in one way, closely paralleled that of Johnny Farrell, United States champion of 1928. While Farrell had been a star for some years, it was the possession of the championship which made his golf name great and which gave Johnny a comfortable life fortune. Similarly, Burke had been a well regarded player, but he had not become one of the real greats of golf. Now he has custody of one of the world's most coveted golf titles. Within 12 months he will have a stake that will see him financially safe for years to come.

Taking not a thing from Burke's fine victory over the field in general and over his play-off rival, George Von Elm, in particular, Bill was a lucky boy. He would admit that, cheerfully.

The best player in the world does not stand a chance if he is not on top of his game. Burke's game reached a climax of perfection in the Ryder Cup matches. He played against the great Archie Compston of England in the singles and won with relative ease. Burke's game on that day had the rangy Briton gasping. Compston said he would have had to score birdies, or eagles, at every hole to have won. Then Burke moved on to Toledo, kept his game well in order, and finished the 72-hole test in a tie for the title with Von Elm, who was playing his first major tournament as a 'business man golfer.'

The play-off found Burke still playing properly and only the most bitter sort of fight on the part of the blond and handsome Von Elm prolonged the extra competition.

Burke's play, incidentally, constitutes a fine lesson for the duffer who thinks about little and talks about little except distance from the tee. His drives, for a star of his calibre, are not long. But they are usually straight. His real game is played near and on the greens. His approaches are truly masterful and his putting stroke is sound. Burke's second best play is with his distance irons or woods.

Golf Experts Made Proper Election Once Again

When Bobby Jones was playing it was an easy thing for the golf expert to nominate probably winners. The expert had only to name Jones to be right, most of the time. After having seen Burke's playing in the Ryder Cup matches at Columbus, several of the golf reporters, including the writer, chose Burke as one of the three or four most probable champions.

CARNERA RIVAL ON THE PACIFIC COAST

SEATTLE, July 23 (UP)—Primo Carnera, giant pugilist, who bows over his opponents with jabs on top of the head, may meet his equal in size and weight if the plans of Biddy Bishop, athletic club manager here, turn out as expected.

Bishop has under his wing one Garth Van Campen, of Seattle. The 20-year-old youth is six feet, seven inches tall, weighs 237 pounds, has a chest measuring 46 inches, waist 33, biceps 16½ and wears a size 14½ shoe.

Van Campen knows little about boxing, but he's learning fast, and Jack Dempsey has asked Bishop for the first chance to use the young giant.

He is not the only large member of his family. His father is six feet four, weighing 228 pounds, and his mother five feet, ten, weighing 178 pounds. He has a sister six feet tall, weighing 240 pounds, and a six-foot, 190-pound brother.

COLUMBUS, O., July 23 (UP)—A skeleton is a man with his inside out and his outside off, according to a grade school student's answer to a question in a test given by the Research Department of Ohio State University.

Among other answers in the test were:

A grass widow is the wife of a vegetarian; a man who marries twice commits bigamy; in Christianity a man may have only one wife—that is called monogamy; a goblet is a male turkey; SOS is a musical term meaning "same only softer"; to germinate is to become a naturalized German.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile—Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and gunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Recruit a substitute.

FRENCH DIRECTOR TO LEAD WOODLAND CONCERT SUNDAY

Pierre Monteux of Paris who will conduct his only concert in the Woodland Theatre, Sunday, July 26.

The open air concert in the Woodland Theatre next Sunday afternoon will be conducted by the fourth of the guest conductors appearing this summer at the Philharmonic concerts. Pierre Monteux, distinguished French director, arrived this week from Paris and is rehearsing every day with the orchestra in preparation for Sunday's concert which unfortunately will be the only one he will conduct in the open air theatre.

Although Monteux appeared as guest conductor during the summer of 1927 for a few concerts at the Stadium in New York and at the Hollywood Bowl, he has not previously been available for the summer concerts in Hillsborough and San Francisco as he is in great demand in all the music centers throughout Europe, and the Philharmonic Society Directors were fortunate in being able to secure this noted French director for a single concert.

Monteux first came to America in 1916 as conductor for the Russian Ballet which made a transcontinental tour. For two seasons following, he conducted the French operas at the Metropolitan Opera in New York and in 1919 he was appointed conductor of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra which he continued to direct for five years. Since his return to France in 1925, he has been conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris for half of the regular winter season and the other half shares with Willem Mengelberg, the director of the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, one of the most noted in Europe.

Although including in his repertoire practically every work embracing all the classics regularly played by symphony orchestras, Monteux has achieved pre-eminent distinction and recognition because of his interest in and devotion to modern composers and their works. He probably has presented for the first time more new works than any other single conductor now before the public and his concerts in Paris are the mecca of composers seeking audition for their latest works.

Politically Speaking

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 23—'Twas a big day for the "I-told-you-so's" when Governor Rolph finally appointed Dudley Moulton, San Francisco horticultural commissioner, as state director of agriculture.

While it may not have been the most popular appointment the governor has made, it relieved a rather tense feeling that has existed for the last 6 months over a successor to George H. Hecke, who quit when Rolph was inaugurated.

A. B. Miller, president of the state board of agriculture, fought Moulton's appointment to the last ditch. He declared flat-footedly that Moulton was not only unqualified for the job, but also wasn't wanted by the dirt farmers of California. But the state board of agriculture had no intention of quitting in a body as had been predicted, Miller said.

Now the deed's done, folks are wondering who will get the three remaining directorships in the Rolph cabinet. These are the department of industrial relations, of which Will J. French is director; department of natural resources, headed by Daniel H. Blood, temporary director, and Military and Veterans' affairs, with Allen H. Bixby, a Young appointee, as director.

It's pretty well known about the state capital that Governor Rolph is whittling his ax for some of the present state job holders. He has a whole flock of positions to fill, some created by the last legislature, and others being vacancies on a score of minor boards and commissions. He has delegated his attorney, Anthony Kennedy, to make a complete list of all appointments the governor has at his disposal.

Two murderers plunged to their doom through the gallows traps at Polson and San Quentin this week—the first since Rolph became governor. One was Charles Simpson, 18, San Francisco "torch murderer," who clubbed an old woman unconscious, saturated her clothes with kerosene and set her afire. The other was Fred Mott, dope peddler who shot a San Francisco radio dealer to death.

The experience left the governor plainly nervous and shaken. He is frankly opposed to the death penalty, and his administration will probably see fewer hangings than that of any previous governor.

"It hurts me to let anyone hang," he said. "But in these two cases the law wouldn't let me intervene in one, and common justice wouldn't permit me to stop the other. If ever a man deserved death, it was Simpson."

50 YEARS AGO

From Times and Gazette
July 23, 1881

Fifty years ago last Monday Mr. and Mrs. Martin Murphy, of Santa Clara county, were married in Quebec, Canada. They came to this state with their family in 1844, and celebrated on Monday their golden wedding at their farm at Mountain View. In San Jose the banks closed at noon, and among the pioneer merchants a general holiday was declared. It was the greatest social event known in that county. It was estimated that there were over 3000 people present on the ground. Special trains ran from San Francisco and from San Jose to accommodate the guests. A large barbecue was provided and 500 gallons of coffee as well as a carload of wines. The dinner was served under the oaks. Nearly all the notables from San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties were present. All passed off in baronial style, and the Murphy golden wedding will long be remembered.

Drive down the nails in your sidewalk. A considerable delegation from the various lodges of Sons of Temperance of San Francisco will pay a fraternal visit to Redwood City Lodge No. 77 on August 2. Germania hall has been engaged for the reception of the visitors, and an interesting time is anticipated.

Rev. R. H. Sink has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church of this city. Mr. Sink has been ministering to the local congregation for some months as a supply and has won the esteem and affection of the people to a marked degree. He is a young man of fine address and abilities and will undoubtedly do a good work here.

Dr. S. S. Stambaugh, of Pescadero, and formerly of this place, and one of the best-known physicians of the county, has been appointed police surgeon of San Francisco vice Dr. J. J. Clark, resigned. What is San Mateo's loss will be San Francisco's gain—an intelligent and skillful physician, an honest man and a good citizen.

ANNULMENT GRANTED
Annulment of the marriage of Helen C. Schupp to George R. Schupp was granted last week by Judge George E. Buck. Annulment was asked by the wife on the ground that Schupp already had a wife at the time that she was married to him. She was granted $50 a month and custody of their two minor children. All community property with the exception of an automobile was granted to the wife. Mrs. Schupp was represented by Jas. T. O'Keefe as attorney.

though he cannot be readmitted to the bar except by action of the supreme court.

"I'd like to get a pardon in 2 or 3 years, he told the governor. That would restore me to citizenship, so I could apply for readmission to practice law. It's going to be an uphill fight to win my way back, but I feel equal to it."

30 YEARS AGO

July 20, 1901

Mrs. Heard is here with her baby visiting her aunt, Mrs. Wentworth. The Boston Bloomer Girls have come and gone leaving no impression of their ability to become champion ball players. A fair sized crowd attended the game, but from the first inning the local team had things their own way. The pitcher for the Bloomers, Lucy Hall, proved herself a twirler of some ability. The dark-eyed shortstop made a hit with the grandstand by her neat throwing to first base. The game was called off at the eighth inning, leaving the local team victor by a score of 18 to 11. The Bloomer Girls were in gaudy uniforms and wore a uniform scowl—all but the center fielder. She was a blond of the strawberry type, and comely of the aggregation. Between times she chewed gum and went on the coaching line.

Judge and Mrs. Hannon leave today for Santa Cruz for a few days' outing. The journey will be made in Mr. Hannon's rubber-tired buggy.

Mrs. George H. Rice and son, Stanley, returned yesterday from a two weeks' trip to Washington. The visit to the north was greatly enjoyed by them.

The thirty-eighth anniversary of the dedication of Mt. Carmel church will be duly observed tomorrow. There will be high mass at 10:30 and a sermon appropriate to the occasion delivered.

The following attended the Epworth League Convention in San Francisco during the week: Mrs. Vasquez, Mr. Stillson, Joseph T. Hader, Mrs. Rockwell, Miss Bessie Winter, J. J. Lewis, J. J. Martin and F. H. Maar.

Strict Laws Cut Immigration
JUAREZ, Mex., (UP)—As a result of stricter application of the immigration laws and the depression, only 143 Mexicans were admitted to the United States through the American consulate in Juarez in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931, according to Consul W. P. Blocker. In the previous fiscal year, 772 visas were granted to Mexicans.

Spanish Filers in Contest
MADRID, (UP)—According to Alvarez Zuñiga, director of civil aviation, several Spanish pilots will participate in the Around-Europe Challenge Contest this year. Last year Spanish pilots did not compete and had only an indirect representation through the Archduke Anton of Hapsburg (at present engaged to Princess Ileana of Rumania), who registered himself as a Spanish entry. To stimulate interest in the contest, and to obtain practice, Zuñiga said that a tournament of flights around Spain would be organized.

Exchange Club Hears Talk by Sports Speaker

Stanford Coach Tells About Friendships Formed in Athletic Groups

Harry Maloney, director of minor sports at Stanford University, was the speaker at the evening dinner meeting of the Redwood City Exchange Club at the Sequoia Hotel, Tuesday evening. Maloney told of interesting friendships formed through sports and physical training classes, and also spoke of the coming Olympic Games, to be held at Los Angeles.

Predictions that Pacific Coast athletes would figure largely in the victories in the Olympic Games were made by the speaker, who pointed out, however, the importance of friendly relations to the Eastern and European athletes during the big meets in Los Angeles.

During the evening the club members were entertained by Miss Mary Flynn, who sang several solos, accompanied by her sister, Miss Francis Flynn. Miss Ames Flynn, one of the I. M. I. rodeo queen candidates, was also present and gave a short talk relative to the contest.

Harold Anderson was the chairman of the meeting.

Kiwanians Hear Talk on Sports

Freeman Bassett, a sales manager for the Spaulding Athletic Goods Company of San Francisco spoke to members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday at the regular Wednesday noon luncheon meeting of that organization. The subject of his talk was the development of athletics which has taken place in America in recent years, and the causes which have been behind it.

He traced the origin and popularity of baseball back to the Civil War, and touched lightly on the development of other popular games such as basketball, rugby and golf. Competitive sports were brought into popularity, he said, when the first conflicts of the American in this country were brought to a close. Before that time the efforts and time of the people had been taken up with combatting the wild animals, Indians and the elements, and no form of athletics was necessary to absorb their surplus energy. But as these obstacles were overcome and more leisure time was produced, sports of all kinds and another were developed to absorb the energies which had been before used in clearing forests, developing farms and building roads.

Orphan Asylums Vanishing from State, Is Claim

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 23.—The "orphan asylum" is a rapidly vanishing institution in California. Today the youngest handicapped by the loss of one or both its parents will receive financial aid from the state, but in a private home, not an orphanage.

A recent survey shows that less than 1,000 children are receiving state aid in orphanages, while more than 12,000 are living at home with their mothers.

It costs the state approximately $3,000,000 every two years to support these children. Last year $23,635 went to the support of orphans in San Mateo county.

"State supervision began in 1913 when the legislature emphasized the desire to keep children with the mother and preserve the family unit," says Miss Miley Pope of the state department of social welfare.

"It also provided that in addition to the amount paid by the state, for each half orphan maintained at home by its mother, the county might pay an amount equal to that paid by the state.

"To the years that have followed many amendments to the law have been made. An orphan is defined as a child abandoned by both its parents, or the child of a permanently and completely incapacitated or tubercular father.

"State aid was raised to $120 a year for whole orphans, half-orphan, abandoned children. Dependent illegitimate children and foundlings were awarded $15 a month up to two years, and then $20 a month."

Prior to 1925 there were two state agencies in charge of orphans' care—the board of control and state board of charities. The 1925 legislature wisely put the activities of these two agencies under one head and the department of public welfare came into being. Later the department of public welfare was created, and the division of aid to needy aged and blind added.

"Prior to 1870 whatever aid was provided to the state went to 'orphan asylums,' said Miss Pope. "They received a stated subsidy each year. The movement toward aiding children in their own homes started in 1878, and has been growing steadily ever since."

Schools of State Shown for Year

Statistics for State Show 17,101 Increase in Attendance

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 23.—(UP)—Attendance records of California elementary schools were broken during 1930-31, according to an announcement made today by the state department of Education.

Records compiled by the department show that the increase amounted to 17,101 pupils over the total of 660,919 of 1929-30, for a new total of 678,020 pupils.

In San Mateo county elementary schools, 10,168 pupils were registered in average daily attendance last year, as compared to 9,661 for the school year of 1929-30.

High schools throughout the state showed a comparative increase of 17,366 or 7.58 per cent, to bring the average daily attendance of all such schools to 246,354.

Apportionments by counties for the junior colleges for the year ending June 30, 1932 were announced as follows:

Los Angeles county, $374,800.; Marin county, $38,700.; Orange county, $98,500.; Riverside county, $40,100.; Sacramento county, $143,500.; San Bernardino county, $105,700.; San Mateo county, $64,800.; Santa Clara county, $64,600.; Sonoma county, $28,600.; Stanislaus county, $67,700.; Yuba county, $17,200.

The junior college apportionment total based on $100 for average daily attendance, amounting to $1,044,200, represents a substantial gain over the apportionment of $635,444.24 made for the year ending June 30, 1931.

Attendance gains made by California schools represent normal increases according to Sam H. Cohn, deputy superintendent of public instruction.

"This year's figures may even represent a slightly higher gain in actual numbers as a result of sub-normal business conditions," Cohn stated. "It has been demonstrated that during times of depression, the school attendance increases. This is true both for adults and children who otherwise might have been kept out of school on working permits."
